Acceptable Use Policy

Users should also be aware that their uses of the College's IT Resources are not completely private. While the College does not routinely monitor individual usage of its computing resources, the normal operation and maintenance of the College's computing resources require the backup and caching of data and communications, the logging of activity, the monitoring of general usage patterns, the scanning of systems and network ports for anomalies and vulnerabilities, and other such activities that are necessary for the rendition of service. The College may also specifically monitor the activity and accounts of individual users of College computing resources, including individual login sessions and communications, without notice, when (a) the user has given permission or has voluntarily made them accessible to the public, for example by posting to a publicly-accessible web page or providing publicly-accessible network services; (b) it reasonably appears necessary to do so to protect the integrity, security, or functionality of the College or other computing resources or to protect the College from liability; (c) an account appears to be engaged in unusual or unusually excessive activity, as indicated by the monitoring of general activity and usage patterns; or (d) it is otherwise required or permitted by law. The College may also monitor the activity and accounts of individual users, upon notice to the individual user, if there is reasonable cause to believe that the user has violated, or is violating this or any other College policy. Any individual monitoring, other than that specified in "(a)", required by law, or necessary to respond to perceived emergency situations, must be authorized in advance by the Chief Information Officer or the Chief Information Officer's designees. It is common practice by the Chief Information Officer to relinquish decision-making responsibility regarding monitoring emails to the appropriate Vice President and/or the President. Use of the College's IT Resources constitutes consent by the user to all of the terms and conditions of this policy, as well as consent to the College's accessing, intercepting, and monitoring of employee use of the College's IT Resources in accordance with this policy.

Union College, in its discretion, may disclose the results of any such general or individual monitoring, including the contents and records of individual communications, to appropriate College personnel or law enforcement agencies and may use those results in appropriate College disciplinary proceedings.

I agree to the above stated policies.
